

CALL FOR PAPERS

The Baltic Journal of Political Science (BJPS)

The Baltic Journal of Political Science is a peer-reviewed scholarly journal published by the Institute of International Relations and Political Science of Vilnius University. The journal geographically focuses on the Baltic Sea area (and more particularly on the Baltic states) and provides a platform for theoretical and empirical research papers and book reviews of researchers, academicians, professionals, and promising students on political theory, comparative politics, international relations and public policy. The journal aims to sustain a wide profile of scientific publications delivering rigorous analytical insights into contemporary political phenomena in the region and to be ranked as a regular and high-quality academic periodical. The BJPS reaches out for academic community and political practitioners and offers ample opportunities for scholarly visibility and potential impact. The journal welcomes article proposals and book reviews related to different facets of the aforementioned scientific fields of political science and thematically similar disciplines. Proposals undergo a blind peer-review process (two anonymous reviewers) by scholars established in their respective fields. Authors and co-authors will receive a copy of the journal with their article. The journal is published in print version.

Submitted works should contain 6000 to 8000 words. Each article is to be accompanied by an abstract of 100–150 words. Authors have to provide information about themselves: name(s), surname(s), academic title(s) and position(s), name of his/her institution, address for correspondence, and e-mail address. All articles should be typed in the 12-point Calibri font with 1.5 line spacing. The journal uses a Harvard-style referencing system¹. References or citations should be indicated within the text, with a full list of all cited references listed alphabetically at the end of the article. Exact page references should be provided when necessary. For example: Smith (2011: 61–64), Smith and Jones (2010: 27–35; 2009: 56–87), Smith et al. (2001: 100). Articles should have an unnumbered introduction and conclusions and chapters numbered in Arabic numerals. If necessary, a chapter may be divided into sub-chapters, e. g., 1.1., 1.2. Relevant tables, figures, and diagrams can be inserted in the text. They are to be indicated consecutively by a number starting from the beginning of the article, and their titles should appear above the inserted object.
